

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

If the requested contents are present in a cache server those contents are sent to the client sending the request but if those contents are not present in 5 the cache server the contents request message with the cache server set as the source is sent to a server, but an address conversion circuit operates to convert the source address of the message into the address of the client that actually issued the request.